ELLE'S GIFTS LIST

by ELLE MAYNARD

Show your appreciation with a little something for those who've helped to make the year special. Have a stash of these locally-made gifts ready to pass along to teachers, mother's helpers, neighbors, clients, or co-workers. Tuck in a personalized note or calling card and—voilà—bring on the holiday season! The purchase of samples for personal consumption is strongly suggested, or a depleted gift supply may result. Here are few ideas from my neck of the woods:

Red Eye Coffee Roasters Guatemala Organic Beans: Fondly referred to as liquid happiness, Red Eye Roasters coffee will brighten anyone's day. Bags of locally roasted beans are available right at the café. Grinding is available at the counter.

Sadie Mae's Chocolate Chip Cookies: Packaged in a bag of six, tied with a ribbon, and always available on the café's counter-top, Sadie Mae's nut-free cookies are enormous (nearly 5" in diameter) and deliciously addictive.

Puopolo Candies: The chocolate enthusiast on your holiday list will savor a box of truffles or a sparkly bag of foil-wrapped stars from Puopolo Candies. Upon entering the store, shoppers experience "chocolate aromatherapy" as the scent of the handcrafted chocolates wafts over them. Divine.
